

Amazzzing Maze

Bootleggers was originally a traditional Québécois house built in 1860, dismantled, transported unto the Hinterland of Charlevoix where it was reconstructed in 1939 by a Gentleman from Pennsylvania, Norie Sellar.

Alcohol is forbidden by the church and prohibition reigns in the United States. Not short of ideas, Mr. Sellar remantles the house and alters the layout of the myriad rooms on the ground floor and conceives
An amazing maze.

To travers succeeding rooms one steals through wardrobes, book shelves or even a small postern.
All are illumined as to how fleetly they scarper by a shrouded gate.
Don't miss the authentic signature of Elvis Presley on Elvis Presley Boulevard.

You may visit the office, the private living room, bedrooms, the game room (mini casino) etc..
Mark the hidden bars, old photographs, furniture and much much more that ornate the premises.
A treasure to discover.

In the attic Sellar conceals a speakeasy,
"Le Club des Monts" where gentry gather.
Hither you drink, eat a good steak and have a great time.
Sitting at a table engraved with names of yesteryears.
Take time to savour the famous "Bootlegger Punch".
Come partake in the conviviality.

Thou the sojourner will be enchanted by this fairytale house with it's legendary telling.
Inlike the person who managed it for over forty years;
Norie Sellar . . .'tys mythical.
